

NO TIME TO WASTE BUILDING RESILIENCE

Planting Seeds of Change, an evening of short talks on different aspects of food resiliency, was held on 14 October aiming to broaden our thinking and give us fresh ideas for creating a local food plan for the Valley.

The evening started with Associate Professor Miranda Miroso, from Otago University's Department of Food Science, highlighting the big issue of food waste. She gave some staggering figures, like the fact that one third of food produced is wasted between the farm and the fork, and this is responsible for up to 8% global greenhouse gas emissions. Miranda has been working with the industry to create pathways for 'Upcycling Food', a new concept that aims to use food that would otherwise have gone to waste, for example, making crackers out of 'ugly' carrots that would normally be discarded, or turning surplus bread into beer. As consumers, it's a new food trend to look out for and support.

Investigating food waste more locally, two students from the Department of Nutrition shared their research on mapping food waste in the Valley, including surveying local shops and cafes.

Susie Townshend from the Dunedin-founded KiwiHarvest (formerly Food Rescue), talked of her daily challenge of rescuing surplus food at a commercial scale and matching it with local organisations to distribute to people in need. This includes our local Kaishare, which provides a box of fresh produce with a short shelf life to local residents, saving it from landfill. A question recently growing for organisers who are nearing capacity is how can we better support the growing demand for Kaishare, as more locals feel the effects of Covid on the economy? Continued on page 3...

Valley Project Closure

The office will close on Friday, 17th of December, and will reopen in the new year on Tuesday, February 8th. Enjoy your summer thoroughly!

THE MORE WE SHARE, THE MORE WE HAVE.

Generosity begins at home, and your local community is your home. That's why the Valley Project's Community Sharing Shelf is so important – we can all give to each other and share in the generosity of our local community. For those who've lived in North East Valley, Opoho, or Pine Hill for some time, the spirit of generosity personified by the Community Sharing Shelf may not come as a surprise. But for me, having arrived in Dunedin a year ago, it's a revelation! Here's the reason why, by way of a short backstory...

Have you ever felt that you have just too much stuff in your life? Too many possessions; more than you want, and more than you need? I remember a few years ago when my older brother made a New Year's resolution to reduce the sheer volume of his own and his family's material possessions. My brother's strategy at that time was, at a minimum, a net zero approach – at least one thing must leave his house if one new thing was to enter. This doesn't sound too hard, and should be easy to stick to. However, our consumerist environment, coupled with the generosity of friends and family, particularly for kids' birthdays and Christmas, can challenge any aspirations of minimalism.

A very good solution is, of course, to donate goods to charity. The Community Sharing Shelf is our own charity. Two of my four children attend North East Valley Normal school; my youngest has just started in the past month. As they travel to and from school they often stop by the Community Sharing Shelf. It's such a lovely experience for them to drop off toys, books, and clothes at the Shelf and, in turn, look for items that are new to them. They've benefited so greatly from this community initiative over the past year, and so too have their siblings and our whole family. We've all read new books, played board games, and refreshed our wardrobes, all the while returning the favour by donating those items that we no longer have need for and can be loved by someone else.

I can imagine that this generosity could, and may well be taken advantage of – those not in need could pilfer from the offerings available. Or else, the shelf could be a dumping ground, a tip when bins are full, or when Op shops are challenging to get to.

Nevertheless, the Community Sharing Shelf is an initiative based on trust, and it's a solution to our consumerist, materialistic consumption, one which embodies a community-minded spirit of collectivism – a give-and-take exercise in its purest form. That's why the Community Sharing Shelf is so important to me. It's not just the tangible exchange of goods, it's the spirit with which the exchange operates – a spirit of community enriching generosity. I'm glad such a practical solution exists to my brother's net zero material problem, and I'm even happier that my children grow up learning that the gift is in the giving.

-- James Canty

KJ Davie, who is currently supporting the Valley Project with The Valley Kai Plan, proposed many ideas and questions on how we can more efficiently and effectively share our backyard bounty. As a keen grower herself, she pondered if she could make the commitment to regularly donate to our local food pantry and Kaishare this season, and if others were keen to join her. Sharing surplus and unneeded food within the community is a growing area of awareness and many apps are being developed to facilitate this, but in the meantime perhaps we could use our new 'Valley Exchange' group on Facebook to share surplus food.

Ronnie Bhogal from Mosgiel, motivated and inspired us with his enthusiasm and energy for cooking healthy school lunches at Silverstream school. Ronnie, seeing the need in his local community, started cooking free school lunches for any child whose family requested it, as a 3-month trial project last year. On seeing its success, the school principal and Ronnie have committed to supplying school lunches for the WHOLE school and have recently been building and planting an edible garden to support this.

From here we'll be working on developing a draft Valley Kai Plan over the next few months and will be asking for your feedback on it. For instance, we'd love to know if there is demand for local cooking or preserving workshops, making the food budget stretch further and reducing food waste at home.

Thinking ahead to summer and autumn, Our Food Network coordinate a Dunedin-wide community fruit harvest scheme helping to pick and redistribute surplus fruit with organisations like Kaishare, Presbyterian Support and Supergrans. We are looking for someone to help manage this within the Valley – we would love to hear from you if you're interested!

CURIOSLY CONSULTING ON THE CREEK

What is your vision for Lindsay Creek? This is the question on the minds of the Open VUE Steering Group. While the vision for an open urban unfenced ecosanctuary still proudly stands tall amongst the urban forest, the Creek is a large piece of the Valley ecosystem puzzle. Gaining insight into your vision of Lindsay creek in 5, 10, 20, and 100 years will direct the mahi's flow.

The group is putting out preliminary consultation feelers while we are limited to gather, with plans for wider community consultation early next year.

The journey of the Creek, and the pathway it travels, is known to us in its current form - but what did it look like in the past, and what could it look like in the future? How do you currently interact with the Creek, or how would you like to in years to come?

These questions, as well as your own thoughts, are highly valuable to us. Have your say by following the link bit.ly/Creek2021, emailing openvue@northeastvalley.org, or coming to see us at the Valley Project during opening hours. Either way, go in the draw to win a PekaPeka bird feeder and an Orokonui Ecosanctuary pass! Keep a lookout for an in-person consultation event in early 2022.

Lindsay Creek drains from Mount Cargill (Kapuka-tau-mahaka), winding its way along the valley floor, fed by many small tributaries, and eventually meets the Water of Leith at the Botanic gardens. On its journey, Lindsay Creek passes through a mosaic of different habitat types, including the shady Bethune's Gully, under the bridge at Bonnington Street, sneaking past and through urban backyards, and eventually meeting up with Water of Leith. Under the water's surface, tuna, macro-invertebrates, fish, and crayfish among many others live. River Shags, ducks, and Paradise Shelducks can often be seen feasting or frolicking amongst the waters. I have even seen a Kererū perched at the Creek's edge taking a sip of water.

YOUNG BUDS GROWING GREEN THUMBS

I like seeing all the pretty flowers and mother nature.
 The garden can make your bad day into a good one.
 I like how you get to learn lots about nature.
 I like how the grass is so nice and soft under my feet.
 I like the cat that comes and watches us work.
 I like looking for bugs and insects that live underground.
 When you breathe in the sweet smell of flowers, all your worries go away.

These are some quotes from NEVN school children. Every Tuesday afternoon they get to enjoy time in the community garden on the school grounds. Guided by volunteers, they learn about soil and soil life, composting, vegetable growing, harvesting and cooking. Last term the children became kaitiaki (guardians) of a few garden beds where they can get hands-on with weeding, sowing, watering, planting, and soon, harvesting and cooking.

Once everything gets growing, the goal for 2022 is to incorporate more cooking processing: sharing and tasting of the produce that has been grown. The garden club is on the lookout for some extra volunteers who would like to bring their enthusiasm for gardening and/or cooking to help these wonderful children grow their knowledge and skills. If you are interested in this, please reach out to Anna on adoorn@gmail.com.

The school gardening club is very appreciative of the support they have received from the wider community. We are very grateful for the gardening gloves that were donated by NZ Safety Blackwoods Dunedin, so that the children can safely participate in all garden activities. Our heartfelt gratitude goes out to our local Youth Grow for regularly supplying us with a variety of seedlings to plant with the tamariki. And we want to extend a huge THANK YOU to the Mitre10 Helping Hands Fund and Mitre10 Dunedin for donating the materials to create a seating area in the centre of the garden where the children and volunteers can come together, sit and observe, listen, wonder, be curious, ask questions or discuss a topic. With the help of some awesome parents and kids, these seats were built in the school holidays and are now ready to be enjoyed by anyone who visits the garden. Do make your way up there and find out more about the community garden weekend working bees.

Our grandparents used to cook with wholefoods and homegrown fruits and vegetables. They knew how to grow, use, and preserve the harvest. They knew what to plant in each season and what they could grow in their local conditions. This knowledge would have been passed down from generation to generation. However, when the supermarkets became stocked with all manner of convenience foods, some of this knowledge may have been lost or neglected by subsequent generations. Many people have become completely reliant on what supermarkets and other food outlets have to offer and have forgotten the blessed feeling; a mix of pride, joy, and elation, when picking, cooking, and eating a beautiful head of homegrown cauliflower, for example. This most basic skill of feeding ourselves with wholesome food is what we wish to instill in our future generations. -- Anna Merial Read

STOP YOUR HERBS AND VEGETABLES FROM BOLTING

Bolting, or going to seed, occurs when a plant prematurely puts out flowering stems before the crop is harvested. Plants more likely to go to seed include: leafy greens such as lettuce, spinach, coriander; members of the Brassica family: cabbage, kale, broccoli, cauliflower, mustard, brussels sprouts; as well as biennial plants such as onions, carrots, beetroot and leeks.

What causes plants to bolt? Plants rely on environmental cues to tell them what to do. For instance, changes in day length or temperature, times of drought, poor soil quality, temperature swings, lack of water, poor soil; attacks by pathogens, insects, or herbivores; and even strong winds can induce flowering.

To prevent bolting, cool season crops should be started as early as possible in Spring. Quick growers such as lettuce, bok choy, broccoli, and mesclun mixes can provide a bounty before the heat of mid-summer. Do a summer sowing two weeks after the Summer Solstice - the longest day of the year - for an Autumn harvest of broccoli, brussels sprouts, kale, beets, or other cool-weather vegetables.

Enrich your soil: the best soils are loamy in texture, drain well, and are rich in nitrogen, phosphorous, potassium, and trace elements. Always add compost to condition soil texture, boost fertility, and retain moisture.

Harvest regularly to stave off premature flowering. Take off the outer leaves of lettuce and spinach to prevent the plants from fully maturing. This encourages the plant to grow its foliage more vigorously.

If your plants bolt, pinch off the flowers as soon as they appear on the plant. With herbs such as chives, parsley and basil, removing the blooms will divert their energy back to the foliage. If you are unable to save the crop, allow the plants to go to seed - bees and other pollinators will enjoy an added supply of food - or collect the seeds for next year's crop.

Finally, try buying bolt-resistant varieties. Look for "slow-bolt" or "heat-tolerant" labels on the seed packets. -- Merylei Guthrie

NORTH EAST VALLEY HOUSEWIFE SAVING THE WORLD ONE SUBMISSION AT A TIME

Hello readers! This month I'm bringing you a new occasional column, Citizen Jane.

It's great to plant trees and trap pests, but one of the most effective things you can do to help make the world a slightly better place is to let politicians, and other peeps in charge, know what you think. That's right, I mean submitting on proposed plans, policies, and strategies.

If you think this sounds eye-wateringly boring, you are absolutely right. There are few things more sleep-inducing than reading through a proposed district plan change or a national waste strategy.

On the upside, nowadays you can make your voice heard from the comfort of your own couch. In less time than it takes to fall into and climb back out of a Covid rabbit hole, you can have a quick read of something and give some feedback on it. It doesn't have to be lengthy, often just a sentence expressing your support (or otherwise) for something is fine. Instead of venting your spleen on FaceTwit, why not vent it to someone who has a legal obligation to listen to and consider it? (Pity those poor civil servants who compile submissions.)

I will endeavor to bring to your attention things local and beyond that you might be interested in commenting on. This month I bring you the Dunedin City Council's Keeping of Animals (excluding Dogs) and Birds Bylaw review. The main change the Council is proposing is banning the keeping of roosters in residential areas unless owners have written permission. Personally, I don't mind the 'cock-a-doodle-do' of a rooster – it makes me feel like I live in the country – but others do, especially at 5am. You can tell the Council what you think at <https://www.dunedin.govt.nz/council/currently-consulting-on/current-consultations/keeping-of-animals-excluding-dogs-and-birds-bylaw-review>. You can do as little as tick a box on the submission form supporting or not supporting the new bylaw. Easy. (Submissions close 17 November.)

As an added bonus we also have the Ministry for the Environment's proposed new waste strategy Taking Responsibility for Our Waste. This aims to set an "innovative bold direction for everyone to transform the way we think about and manage waste". They even have a wee YouTube video to watch. Frankly, I'd like to see the people that create the waste to take a bit more responsibility for it and I think the Government could do with a bit of encouragement here so I'm going to go to <https://consult.environment.govt.nz/waste/taking-responsibility-for-our-waste>, have a quick read of the summary document and then have my say! Go on, you can too! (Submissions close 26 November.) -- Citizen Jane

BUS SHELTER UPDATE

Back in August the ODT notified the public that some Dunedin bus shelters were not up to standards. Investigations have since been completed, as promised.

A DCC spokesperson has confirmed some bus shelters in North East Valley, Opoho, Dalmore, and Pine Hill are among those covered by a 'Notice to Fix'. The list of affected shelters includes three in Opoho, five in North East Valley, one in Dalmore, and two in Pine Hill, all of which were constructed between 1996 and 2013 and have since been found to lack building consent.

The Dunedin City Council is currently working to remedy the situation. The bus shelters remain safe for the public to use.

RETROFITTED FOR THE FUTURE

Another exciting makeover is being undertaken here in the Valley! A couple years back, Mercury Power and local Control Focus electricians brought you Evie, the blazing yellow, 1957 classic Ford Fairlane that traded its combustion engine for a fully electric alternative. Now a 1983 Toyota 4WD Hilux is on a roll to join Evie on the other side!

Affectionately dubbed the 'Electrolux' by its new owner, Control Focus Managing Director, James Hardisty, this classic pick-up was one of the toughest in its era. Many still consider the 3rd-generation Hilux the ultimate off-roading vehicle and is highly sought among collectors worldwide.

As an electric conversion with a fresh, smooth-as-butter mustard coat, will Electrolux be too nice to take off-road? Come January '22, James and his team at the neighboring Valley Community Workspace will be the first to find out.

Consider the power in the transplants: its permanent magnet motor can produce 350 newton meters of torque powered by a 70kwh battery pack of Lithium Ion Phosphate cells (a.k.a. LiFePo4); the battery pack is composed of 95 X 230ah (amp hour) batteries in series (bulk battery configuration) having a nominal voltage of 302v dc; range of 250km with a fast recharge time of 1.5 hours; onboard 6.6kw charger for overnight charging; 3 cents per km to run on the open road; main speed controller is NZ made by Scott Drive Ltd., and battery management system is designed right here in the Valley by EV-lution.

Could your lemon use a new lease on life? Need the jargon translated? Drop into the workshop on Allen Street.

TURNING TIDES - DARLING REALTY REVIEW

Here's a quick update on the real estate market from a sales and property management viewpoint in the Valley. On the sales front, quality family homes in our area are generally quite tightly held, which is still the case, and investment properties in North Dunedin used to be highly sought after. However, the tide has turned on the residential property investment market due to the most recent changes announced by our government.

The introduction of a 10-year bright-line test and the inability to claim the interest on your investment property mortgage (unless it is a new build) has seen a significant reduction of attention from investors as, quite frankly, the numbers no longer stack up. The economists and banks are predicting interest rate rises which further disincentives people from entering this market, and we are seeing clients and customers either sitting on their hands and waiting to see what happens or looking elsewhere for a return on their money. The upside to this is the opportunity for first-home buyers to now get into the market. The valley has always been a popular location for young families to cut their teeth.

Quality family homes are still in high demand with purchasers and if you have an empty section in the sun for sale, expect a high level of interest from all and sundry, just as long as the pandemic doesn't stifle our building supply chain.

On the property management front, with the leasing season coming to an end for students, we have noticed the students are getting in faster each year, with leasing season commencing in late April, early May this year, rather than July in previous years. Warm family homes are still extremely sought after as there is not enough of these around to accommodate everyone. What we do have come up leases extremely quickly, and most after just one viewing with our office seeing multiple applications. The rental sector is very much driven by market forces of supply and demand.

If you ever need any advice on leasing or selling or where you can add value to your home, we are more than happy to have a no obligation, no strings attached chat. -- Tony Watts - Sales Consultant, Christine Manning - Property Manager

A BATTY BBQ The Valley Project staff were itching to bring the community back through their doors. With a bit of Covid-related rigmarole, at last they were safely opened...and in festive fashion! Edible crafts, outdoor games, costumes, sizzlers, hot drinks, live music, and much needed catch-up were had. Thanks to all participants! We missed you dearly.

Do join us for the next event! Follow our Facebook Page to keep updated: @valleyproject

A SLICE OF THE GARDENS

Our stunning local Dunedin Botanic Garden recently celebrated the 50th anniversary of its annual Rhododendron Festival with a series of events from art and florist workshops, to tours -and talks about one of the city's most recognised and loved plants. In the build-up to this event, local Valley resident, photographer, and writer, Guy Frederick, has been working on his own project, culminating in the release of a poster and 2022 calendar which captures the beauty of the Garden.

Guy says the Botanic Garden has played a big part in his life since first arriving in the city as a student in the 90's and continues to do so on his daily walking commute to work. "The Gardens was one of my favourite study spots for end-of-year exams whenever the spring weather behaved, and I have always felt they are one of the city's most undercelebrated charms," Guy says. "So I decided to dedicate my skills to capture a slice of the Gardens vast beauty that comes with the annual cycles of growth and decay."

Guy is also the treasurer of the Friends of the Dunedin Botanic Garden and a portion of any profits made from sales will be returned to the Friends who support projects in the Garden through raising funds from plant sales and running the Information Centre. The calendars are available for purchase at the Dunedin Art Gallery and Toitu, and both the calendar and poster are available for order through the Botanic Garden Information Center, or by contacting Guy directly through his website at www.guyfrederick.com.
